ABOUT

Anissa

Anissa Marie Bass, an enchanting actress, executive producer, author, and devoted nurse, radiates a purpose-driven aura that kindles the dormant dreams within us. With 8 honorable years in the Army National Guard, Anissa's resilience shines through in every role she undertakes. Her journey has been adorned with accolades, including features in Victory Productions by Karlton Clay, Southern Style Magazine by Edward S. Jones, and captivating interviews by the illustrious Wendy Williams herself, not once, but twice.

Anissa's artistic talents blaze even brighter on the stage and screen. Her star turn in Karlton Clay's cinematic masterpiece "Bondage" spanned four gripping seasons, showcasing her dynamic range. She graced Michael Ray Anderson's "A Polished Soul" as a compassionate nurse, etching her presence into our hearts. DL Hutchins and Michael Buie's "C'est La Vie, It's All Good" bore witness to her captivating performances.

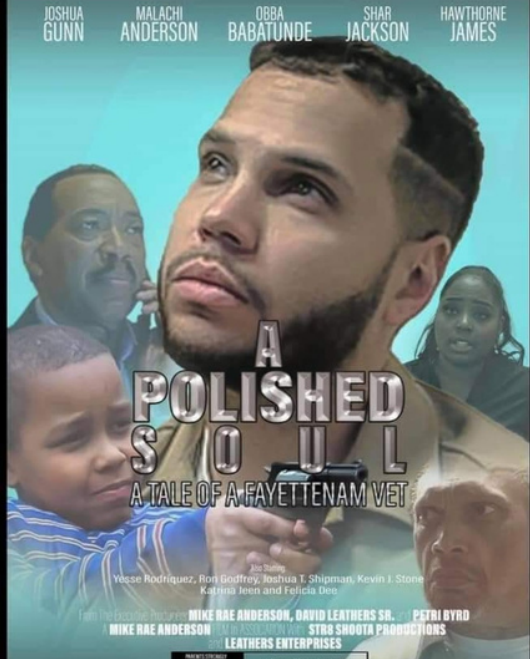

Anissa's creative prowess extends to her role as an executive producer, guiding projects like "Lovers Lane" with Karlton Clay, an embodiment of her dedication to both art and collaboration. Off-screen, she champions breast health and stomach cancer awareness and advocates against sexual violence in the military, a testament to her unyielding character.

Where dreams come alive, and love knows no bounds. "May the Light of the Ancestors never Stop Guiding your Path and Face It." ~Anissa
